

5 Tips to Write an Awesome College Essay

You cannot exclude write my essay from your academic life. You will be asked to write an essay throughout your academic life. College essay presents you as the unique individual you are to the prospective colleges. It is an opportunity to paint a picture of you, for the guys in the admission offices, which is more than your grades and extracurriculars.

For the essay to provide a genuine portrayal, it will have to be nurtured and styled by you.

I have divided the college essay writing process into three parts:

- Coming up with the essay topic
- Writing the essay
- Reviewing it

Each of the above parts of the essay is important. A good essay excels in all three parts.

Getting help from a free essay writer might be beneficial for you but in the long run, it is better for you to learn how to write my essay for me and improve your writing skills. Here are 5 tips when planning, writing, and reviewing the essay that you should take heed of in order to ace your college essay:

Start Early

You will be amongst the thousands of students applying for a placement in each of the universities of your choice. Get an advantage over them by starting your essay ahead.

A good time to start with your essays is two to three months before the deadlines: Normal Deadline or Early Decision Deadline.

Start late and it will be hard for you to shuffle it with your school workload.

It's imperative to list down on a planner to note down the deadlines of various colleges and departments that you will be applying to. You should note down the all-important essay questions along with their word limit.

Pick a topic that works for you

Jotting down what's in your head, leaves it free to ponder over your essay topics in your head. Many students get right into writing, barely reflecting upon which topic to choose for their essays. When the essay writer finds it hard to make the words flow from mind to paper. The fault is usually either a cluttered brain or the wrong topic for the essay.

An essay topic should allow you to:

- Communicate your aspirations
- Evoke genuine emotions and memories.
- Portray what defines your character.

Plan Your Essay

A college essay is a story that starts with a struggle or a perspective that drives your story to a final conclusion of the present you.

An essay should read like a story, with you as the main protagonist.

Try to delve into memories that define you as the person that you are and connect various parts of your essay. Each part should take your story forward. Defining with each how it evolved you.

For example, a student who as a child saw his father's spectacles as a source of authority. Something that he fancied as a child and tried to exude when he was prescribed glasses.

The creative writing tool of 'Show, Don't Tell' fits well here.

Write

Writing is usually, rewriting. Don't bother to get it perfect the first time or worry about the word-limit.

It's important, however, to create a unique hook in the mind of the reader. You can refine it as you write. The hook should be powerful and should command the readers' attention.

Take this sentence for example: "As a child, I was in love with the mechanical gears that lived inside my Dad's watch. Then I had to take them out..."

A sentence such as this, not only captures a memory but places the origin story for a student who is a mechanics enthusiast.

Review

While you are near a finished essay or its structure, it is important to review the essay from a professional, your peers, or your teacher/education counselors. With their experience, they will guide you to shape your essay to its potential best.

Also, be ruthless with your editing: each sentence and word should serve a wider purpose. So never be afraid to get rid of the dead weight, otherwise, it will fetter your essay to be. But if you still need some assistance, you can find a write essay for me service to help you craft an amazing essay for you. Happy writing!
